WHAT TOMORROW BRINGS - ELEONORE HOLMGREN

A dramatic and intimate narrative about a young woman's life in the countryside around the turn of the century, for readers who love strong female protagonists and richly drawn historical settings. The first in a planned series, the Matilda series, following the successful Lindö series.

Uppland, 1900. Twenty-year-old Matilda serves as a maid on the prosperous farm of Storängen, working long days in a world where women are expected to endure, quietly, gratefully, and without question. It is a good position, people say. A safe life. A life she should accept. But Matilda wants more.

She dreams of Uppsala: a city of electric lights, new ideas, and the promise of independence. As soon as she comes of age, she plans to leave, just like her friend Frida before her, certain that life in the city must be freer, richer, and far more thrilling than the narrow existence waiting for her in the countryside.

Then Valter Enander arrives. Handsome, magnetic, and restless, he speaks of freedom and a future beyond the parish's rigid expectations. Matilda falls headlong, convinced he is her way out. But beneath Valter's charm lies something darker. When betrayal shatters her plans, Matilda is left to pick up the pieces of her life, and face the brutal cost of trusting the wrong man.

As long-buried family secrets begin to surface, Matilda learns that her grandmother once worked as a seamstress in Uppsala. Matilda can sew too, a skill her grandmother insisted she master before she died. Now Matilda must decide: will she repeat the fate that has claimed generations of women before her, or rewrite it? And to do that, Matilda must confront love, violence, loyalty, and herself.

WHAT TOMORROW BRINGS is the first novel in a sweeping historical family saga of love and loss, female resilience, and the fierce struggle to shape one's own destiny. The Matilda series follows two sisters and their families, moving between rural Uppland and the growing city of Uppsala at the dawn of a new century.

2026 – What Tomorrow Brings

2021-2024 – The Lindö series

Eleonore Holmgren works in communication and lives in Uppsala with her family. She debuted in 2021 with THE LAST SUMMER, which became a great sales success. It was followed by two more books in the Lindö series, with 300 000 copies sold across the series and sold to 4 markets.

THE HOUSE AT PEARL RIVER - WILLIAM ÄLGEBRINK

A northern Swedish John Ajvide Lindqvist, for readers of Andrew Michael Hurley, Mikael Niemi and Stina Jackson, THE HOUSE AT THE PEARL RIVER is a dark suspense novel with a touch of literary horror, set in the Swedish Arctic.

Set amid the snow-filled forests of Jokkmokk, this striking debut follows Dylan Häggström, a solitary bus driver living on the margins of his community, still haunted by the disappearance of his sister years earlier.

Dylan is convinced his heart is physically shrinking, and though doctors find nothing wrong, he believes only drinking blood can keep him alive. As winter deepens and his condition worsens, Dylan becomes convinced that animal blood will no longer suffice. He starts making a desperate plan.

Each day, Dylan drives the same rural route. Each day, a young boy boards his bus on the way to school. As Dylan's isolation deepens, his increasingly frantic actions draw this young boy and his mother into a tragic chain of events. What follows is a struggle for survival: a man driven by delusion and grief, and a child forced to save himself, in a tragic situation whose consequences will reverberate for years, for both victim and perpetrator.

Taut, unsettling, and psychologically acute, this award-winning debut probes the boundary between illness and belief, innocence and culpability, and asks what happens when grief and betrayal are left to fester in silence.

TWO BOYS, ONE LIFE - ANDREAS EKSTRÖM

They were twelve and inseparable when Henrik suddenly died, and Andreas' life was irrevocably altered. But what really happened that day? Did Henrik suffer? And could he have been saved?

In this spellbinding and charged memoir, Andreas Ekström returns to the summer of 1987 when a tragic traffic accident killed his closest childhood friend and split his own life in two: he was the boy who lived, while Henrik did not. Now, as an adult, Andreas Ekström is waiting for a liver transplant that may never come and finds himself suspended between life and death. As he prepares for the possibility of his own death, Andreas becomes determined to follow every thread of the accident, he combs through testimonies, police reports, and medical records. He does not have every detail, but to die without knowing feels unthinkable.

Moving between the hospital room and the deserted road where everything changed, Ekström weaves a bigger narrative of friendship, loss, grief, and survival. With stylistic precision and dark, disarming humour, he explores the moral weight of being the one who lived as he tries to answer the question, is memory enough to keep someone alive?

"To lose someone at a young age and being forced to carry both grief and pride, this is precisely what Andreas captures here with such force. From the moment I first read it, I knew this would be an important book for us. Any editor looking for a powerful, deeply personal, and universally human story should take a serious look."

THE ROS & GARP SERIES - FRITZDORF & ROSENLIND

The Ros & Garp series, with the first instalment publishing in March 2026 with the following two titles in April 2026, is tightly structured, fast-paced, combining astute and thrilling storytelling with psychological depth. The authors are seasoned scriptwriters, now appearing in print for the first time.

In CONSUMED BY FIRE, the first instalment, a respected sports teacher is poisoned, and when an execution video surfaces online, detectives Ragnar Ros and Siri "Garp" Karlsson uncover a brutal act of revenge rooted in a long-buried crime from 1995. As the investigation unfolds it becomes clear that justice was denied decades earlier and someone has decided to correct it. A morally complex, page-turning thriller about guilt, memory, and the cost of silence where the twists keep coming, while Ros and Garp struggle with challenges at work as well as in their personal lives.

THE ALLEYWAY KILLING, the second book, features the murder of a local politician which draws Ros and Garp into a growing investigation that reveals a radical network preparing violent attacks ahead of a national election. Weapons are smuggled, public institutions threatened, and a charismatic extremist leader rallies followers willing to die for the cause. A tense and timely crime novel about ideology, manipulation, and the fragility of democracy.

THE MISSING ONES is the third instalment and is set during the April Walpurgis Night celebrations in Halmstad when six bodies are unearthed at an archaeological site; not ancient remains but victims from the past two decades, including one just buried body. As Ros and Garp reopen forgotten disappearances, they confront the possibility of a serial killer who has operated undetected for years. A chilling investigation where history refuses to stay buried.

COLD SEA - HÅKAN ÖSTLUNDH

In COLD SEA, Håkan Östlundh returns to the seemingly idyllic island of Gotland. A decade ago, the sea took two young lives. Now, it has claimed another, and tragedy begins to look like murder. The first in a gripping new series, the book explores buried secrets and fractured friendships, as Östlundh reinvents Gotland noir for a new generation of readers, proving once again that he is a master of Gotland noir.

A decade has passed since the sea claimed Stella and Albin during a late-night swim. What truly happened on the beach in Austre that night after the party has remained a mystery. They knew all too well how dangerous the Baltic Sea's undercurrents can be, yet they still entered the icy water. The grief was heavy to bear for Freja and the rest of their close-knit group of friends.

When, ten years later, Freja receives the devastating news that her brother has unexpectedly taken his own life in the family's summer house, just outside Austre, her world collapses once more. With no help from the police, who are convinced that Jakob's death was a suicide, Freja has no other choice than to start her own investigation.

In COLD SEA, readers follow a group of young summer visitors desperately trying to hold one another together in the aftermath of tragedy. Here, Håkan Östlundh returns to the sun-drenched island of Gotland, that he knows like the back of his own hand. Readers familiar with the Fredrik Broman series will not be disappointed.

BONES OF THE DEAD - PER FAXNELD

"A page-turner from Northern Sweden, [with] a truly unforgettable heroine!"

JOHANNA HAEGERSTRÖM, EDITOR,
ALBERT BONNIERS FÖRLAG / SWE

Book 1 in the Edda Chronicles. Meet Edda Erlenstam, a trailblazing heroine who, in the spirit of a female Indiana Jones, traverses the remotest regions of 1920s–40s Sweden in search of ancient artefacts and forgotten folk legends, across the series.

Northern Sweden, summer 1929. Edda arrives in Jämtland armed with a revolver, a camping stove, and her bicycle. Officially, as an assistant archivist at the National Folklore Archive, she is collecting local myths and oral traditions. Unofficially, she is hunting a legendary seventeenth-century grimoire of black magic once owned by the enigmatic Mister Ola, which vanished after his death.

Finding the book would secure Edda's precarious position at the Archive, where her abilities are dismissed because she is a woman. But raised working-class in the north, Edda knows how to earn trust and extract secrets from even the most guarded communities.

When Edda and her lover, Dr Jonas Tomner, realise others are also searching for the grimoire, their quest turns into a deadly pursuit across moors and deep forests, as suspicion and violence escalate.

Meanwhile, Edda is plagued by dizziness, hallucinations, and waking nightmares. Are these side effects of Tomner's sleeping draughts, or evidence that ancient legends of dark magic and hidden creatures may be terrifyingly real?

BONES OF THE DEAD is a gripping historical suspense debut steeped in Nordic folklore, inspired by the real-life folklorist Ella Odstedt, and introduces a fearless heroine destined to endure.

When human remains are uncovered behind the wall of an apartment building, DI Henrik Jungersen is drawn into a disturbing investigation that suggests long-term concealment and a perpetrator intimately embedded in everyday life.

Meanwhile, Jensen is on maternity leave, attempting to adjust to motherhood, when her fragile equilibrium is shattered by a startling claim: reclusive literary icon Valde Brix insists he is her biological father. The revelation comes with a demand. Brix is being stalked, and he wants Jensen to use her investigative instincts to identify the person intent on destroying him.

When a woman connected to Brix is found brutally murdered, Jensen, working alongside her sharp-witted teenage apprentice, Gustav, can no longer stay on the sidelines. As Jungersen's case deepens, it becomes clear that the stalker's aim is not intimidation but erasure.

What begins as an inquiry into obsession and authorship turns chillingly personal. As past and present converge, Jensen realises the threat reaches far beyond Brix, and that her own family may be the ultimate target.

ISLAND - SARA B. ELFGREN

"A chamber play about life and death where betrayal, regret, love and hate reach a boiling point."

NIKLAS NATT OCH DAG (AUTHOR OF 1793, 1794 AND 1795)

During a dinner party on a remote island, with a violent storm closing in, Mirjam is compelled to help her estranged sister cover up a heinous crime, only to discover that survival may require crossing a line neither of them can return from.

When Mirjam arrives on the island where she and her sister once spent their summers, she hopes for reconciliation. Instead, she finds herself drawn back into the emotional gravity of a relationship marked by secrecy, disparity, and a longing to belong.

Nia's birthday dinner is meant to be a celebration; four women, old friends, and a night cut off from the mainland by a gathering storm. But before the guests arrive, Mirjam stumbles upon a dead body in the upstairs bathroom. But things are not as they seem, as she will come to understand as the evening wears on.

As the dinner party unfolds, the sisters conceal the truth while the darkness gathers around them. Accusations simmer, past betrayals resurface, and Mirjam realises that protecting Nia will require more than silence. It will demand action, and she might not be prepared for the long-lasting effects of her decision.

ISLAND is a claustrophobic psychological suspense novel about the bonds of family ties, manipulation, and the terrifying realisation that love and loyalty can make accomplices of us all.

"Everything convinces us: the plot, the setting, the characters, and the writing. The narrative tension holds up well, the theme of violence is explored with depth, and the narrative voice is engaging. Plus, the atmosphere and the locations, both in the city and on the island, are beautifully done. She is a talented author with many more stories to tell, and we prefer to invest in authors rather than just individual books."

THE STRING THAT SNAPPED - MARIANNE CEDERVALL

Warm humor, cold murders in the same vein as Murder in Midsomer.

The series revolves around the fictional parish of Mullvalds on the island of Gotland. She teams up with former police officer Tryggve to uncover the truth. THE STRING THAT SNAPPED is the eighth book in the Anki & Tryggve series.

Mullvalds Medieval Market is a beloved annual event. Visitors enjoy crafts, archery, pony rides, jousting tournaments, and live music. It is a joyful day and a highlight at the end of summer. But this year, a new feature, an archery competition, ends in tragedy when the village's wealthiest man, Niklas Duse, is struck by an arrow. As Duse collapses, Anki and Tryggve begin investigating what truly happened.

At the same time as she conducts her own private murder inquiry, Anki faces a far greater worry: her son, Jocke, has disappeared during a cruise abroad. The circumstances surrounding the ship's fate are unclear—and the question is whether Jocke will return alive.

A new perspective on old mysteries, where every case hides more answers than first meet the eye. The Profiler Series is a powerful new voice in Scandinavian crime.

At the heart of the series is its unique duo: Detective Inspector Monica Eurell, relentless, shaped by the trauma of her sister's disappearance, and profiler Benjamin Krantz; trained in the FBI tradition, uncompromising and psychologically incisive. Together, they form a team that is both three-dimensional and determined.

HIDDEN IN SHADOWS is the fourth book in the series. Three women have disappeared without a trace from a house in Dalarna. There are no witnesses, no suspects, and perhaps not even a crime. Have the women left voluntarily, or has someone taken them? An impossible case it seems. Until Monica Eurell starts to dig.

THE RATS - MARIA EK

In a remote forest community where winter silences everything, one man's unraveling coincides with a disappearance and a death, events that point to far greater, shared secrets.

Deep in the forests north of Stockholm, where silent pine trees loom over abandoned farms, we meet Sven, newly retired and living alone in a decaying farmhouse with his dog, Lukas. Nature is his refuge, but as winter closes in and darkness seeps through the cracks in his old house, nocturnal rustling sounds begin to unsettle him. His sense of order frays, and so does his grip on himself.

Enter Börje, the local rat exterminator and Sven's only friend, summoned to deal with the pest infestation but instead drawn into Sven's growing unease. When Sven's estranged sister Britt unexpectedly reappears after many years, old wounds are reopened, and a chain of events is set in motion that will expose long-suppressed resentments and devastating family secrets.

At the same time, the small community is shaken by another mystery: an old lady, Viola, vanishes without a trace. As rumours spread and suspicion takes hold, the question becomes impossible to ignore. Did Viola lose herself in the unforgiving landscape, or did something far darker happen in the woods?

THE RATS is an accessible literary debut blending vivid characters and evocative prose in a haunting portrait of rural Roslagen, where deepening isolation exposes loneliness, guilt, and complicity, and where the past refuses to stay buried.

HEARTWOOD - ULRIKA LAGERLÖF

The Woodland series is a sweeping trilogy set in Sweden from the 1930s to the 1970s, interwoven with a present-day storyline. Centring women's lives and labour, it explores the magnificent Swedish forest and the conflicts, secrets, and loyalties rooted within it. The first two books have sold over 90,000 copies in Sweden alone, and CLOUDBERRY MIRE was awarded second prize in the Book of the Year 2025.

CLOUDBERRY MIRE unfolds across two timelines. In the late 1930s, teenager Siv works as a cook in a remote forest cabin in northern Sweden, an experience that offers both hard-won independence and the love that will shape her life. In the present day, her granddaughter Eva works for a logging company and is sent to Västerbotten to defuse protests against new felling operations. There, she uncovers traces of her family's past that will alter her future.

In PALE SOIL, set in 1949, long-buried secrets surface after a tragic accident with fatal consequences, while a forbidden love emerges against the odds. In contemporary Djupsele, Eva's relationship with her son Vilgot fractures as his involvement in environmental protests places them on opposing sides.

HEARTWOOD begins when a body is discovered in the forest outside Djupsele, leading back to the summer of 1977, when Eva's father disappeared. As an old log cabin is rebuilt by the lake, generational bonds are reforged, and the past demands reckoning. When is it time to forgive and forget, and when must one fight?

MISS FORTUNE - CHRISTIN MAGDU

"I totally fell in love with this book. [...] It made me laugh, it almost made me cry, and I fell in love with the chaos, the drama, and most of all, with Amanda. It's funny, romantic, full of all the right tropes, and absolutely original – not to mention completely unputdownable."

INGRID MEURS, ACQUIRING EDITOR AT DE FONTEIN, NETHERLANDS

A witty, warm, and laugh-out-loud romantic comedy about finding yourself, learning to overcome mistakes, and discovering that love often shows up when we least expect it.

Artist Amanda Bourget is having a historically bad day. The kind that involves her ex, his new girlfriend, and a jewellery store. Her panic-induced solution? A desperate lie and an expensive engagement ring. The only problem? The ring is now hopelessly stuck on her finger, even though she's very single.

Naturally, a lie this good can't stay quiet. It spreads like wildfire, and soon her fake fiancé has a very real name and face, thanks to her sisters finding a photo of Pagalos, a stranger she recently had a run-in with.

The news of her "engagement" sends her father into a state of pure joy, a dangerous state for a man with a fragile heart. Before she can stop him, he's not only broadcast her engagement across the entire family grapevine, but has also set a date for a grand party to welcome his new son-in-law. Suddenly, the stakes aren't just her pride; they're his life. Her mission is no longer a choice: she must find Pagalos and convince him to play along, or risk killing her dad with the truth.

There's just one tiny problem. Pagalos is arrogant, infuriatingly handsome, and has zero interest in her insane plan. He also has a shadowy past he's desperate to protect. As Amanda tries to wrangle her fake fiancé, she discovers that the real danger is accidentally falling for the one man who could truly break her heart.

THE MUSE - MATS STRANDBERG

Mats Strandberg returns with a gothic stand-alone in his unmistakable blend of horror and razor-sharp contemporary insights, a book that has captivated readers of BLOOD CRUISE, THE HOME and THE CONFERENCE.

Divorced crime writer Hedda Strömberg is out of money, out of confidence, and out of inspiration. When her successful colleague David Ridings invites her to stay at his family's grand summer estate, Villa Thamyris, it feels like a lifeline.

The mansion was once a hub for Sweden's cultural elite, built by a legendary painter obsessed with the ancient myth of the Muses. Hedda is both seduced and unsettled by the family's wealth, talent, and effortless artistic authority. At Villa Thamyris, writing becomes intoxicating again, and words flow as if from an external force. Hedda begins to wonder whether creativity is not a gift, but something summoned.

As Midsummer's Eve approaches and her young son Hugo joins her at the estate, Hedda uncovers the family's darkest secret: their artistic genius is sustained by a mysterious pact, and creativity demands sacrifice. And now, both Hedda and Hugo are in mortal danger.

Blending psychological suspense, literary horror, and razor-sharp social commentary, THE MUSE explores artistic obsession, envy, class privilege, and the terrifying question of where inspiration truly comes from, and what we are willing to sacrifice for it.

Strandberg's horror novels, as well as his YA novel THE END, have been widely praised by critics and readers alike. All of his books have been or are being adapted for film and television, and sold over 265 000 copies in Sweden.

FATHERLAND - CARL ÅKERLUND

"The prose is fluid... with influences from both Sara Lidman and Kerstin Ekman."

ULRIKA KÄRNBORG, EXPRESSEN / SWE

FATHERLAND is Carl Åkerlund's razor-sharp literary debut, a haunting, assured novel where Nordic myth and contemporary realism entwine to interrogate identity, nationhood, and the fragile idea of home.

When war suddenly erupts in their homeland, a Swedish family hiking in the Pyrenees finds themselves unable to return home. Cut off from their language, culture, and state, they become reluctant refugees in Spain, dependent on the mercy of strangers as the Swedish government collapses. As displacement stretches from days into months, and a devastating personal loss fractures the family further, their assumptions about safety, loyalty, and belonging begin to unravel.

Parallel to this runs a second narrative set in early nineteenth-century Västerbotten, in the uneasy aftermath of the last war fought on Swedish soil. Though peace has been declared, the forests around Houmfors thrum with fear and rumour. When Lovisa, a feisty and free-spirited teenager, falls into a forbidden love with Mihail, a Russian deserter hiding in the deep forests, their secret sets off consequences that reverberate far beyond their own lives.

With prose both precise and atmospheric, Åkerlund explores how fear is inherited, how borders harden, and how the line between us and them is endlessly redrawn. Rooted in Nordic folklore yet urgently contemporary, FATHERLAND announces a powerful new literary voice.
