“A raw, beautiful story about surviving the impossible and learning how to move forward . . .” –Aiden Thomas, New York Times bestselling author of The Sunbearer Trials

When her mother refuses entry to a stranger named Richard at her father’s funeral, 17-year-old Mira Howard doesn’t understand why. But snooping through her father’s things reveals that Richard was her father’s boyfriend – a boyfriend she never knew about. In fact, Mira never even knew for sure that her dad was gay. Hoping to feel more connected to her late father, Mira reaches out to Richard without telling her mom, who is still angry from the divorce. As Mira and Richard become closer, Mira gains more and more insight into the side of her father that she never got to see.

Grieving that she never got to connect with her dad about their shared queerness, Mira asks that Richard teach her “how to be queer” while she navigates a new crush on her co-worker, which brings her out of her diary and into the real world.

But as Mira grows more confident in herself, she finds it hard to keep her relationship with Richard a secret, questioning why her family never talked about her father’s sexuality in the first place. Soon Mira has to decide if she wants to keep the peace or honor her father’s memory by being her truest self.

“This magical middle-grade read will have readers curious to learn more about the real Seneca Village.”
- Booklist

Everything is changing, and twelve-year-old Rowan Robinson hates it. She’s dreading having to spend her summer in New York City with her Aunt Monica, even though she used to love it. But things are just different after her father passed away. Without him, nothing about her world feels the same.

Things start to get a little better when Rowan brings her dad’s old camera to Central Park to take pictures. But as she’s snapping photos, she notices a strange mirror-like shape floating in the air. When she gets closer to it, she trips and falls through the portal, and after she lands, she finds herself in a different world: Seneca Village, where Black people with magical abilities seem to live in the past, in a time without phones or electricity. At first, Rowan thinks it must be a dream, but the more time she spends in the village with her new friend Lily, the more she wants it to be real.

But outsiders aren’t even supposed to be able to find Seneca. Rowan and Lily aren’t sure how Rowan was able to see the portal, but they suspect it might have something to do with the girl who normally guards the portal having gone missing.

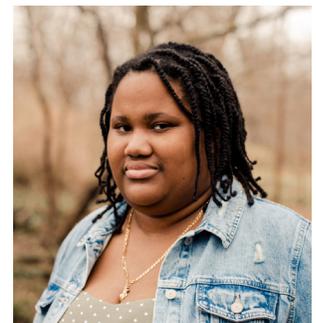

As Rowan and Lily search for clues to help find the missing girl and uncover the truth of the portal’s magic, Rowan begins to realize what secrets this village might be hiding, and how the events of the past still linger in the present day.

A Junior Library Guild Gold Standard Selection!

Danilo Osorio Jr.'s baseball skills were once the pride of his father and entire hometown of El Chorrillo, Panamá. But that was then, and this is now...

Following 1989's Operation Just Cause, a US military invasion that left his neighborhood decimated, Danilo couldn't care less about baseball or the father who abandoned him for opportunities in the States. Now Danilo's focus is taking care of his mamá and sister and trying to save them all from needing to relocate to a refugee camp.

When Danilo unintentionally catches the eye of a baseball recruiter and is offered the opportunity to visit and train in California – the same place as his father's last known address – he is tasked with deciding to go or stay. But if playing baseball could help him find his father and secure the extra funds his family needs, Danilo is willing to travel anywhere, even to the very country responsible for destroying his home.

Between his tough-as-nails baseball coach, ultra-competitive teammates, and overly enthusiastic host family, Danilo's plans encounter some curveballs. And when his turn to bat finally comes, he'll have to decide what and who he's actually fighting for.

In a coastal town scarred by oil, secrecy, and silence, ten-year-old Nimi is forced to grow up far too quickly.

When his fisherman father hauls a mysterious, silver-scaled being from the sea – Angele, a merman from a forgotten world – Nimi’s life and the fate of Ikanre shift irreversibly. As whispers of ‘mamiwota’ spread, what begins as wonder curdles into fear, greed, and bloodlust. The villagers’ hunger – both literal and spiritual – spirals into a violent reckoning, echoing centuries of betrayal and desecration.

As his home erupts into chaos, Nimi must navigate a landscape where gods shrink from memory, family unravels in front of his eyes, and the line between the human and the mythical dissolves. With the last of a dying people in his care and a forest god no larger than a child’s thumb beating faintly in his pocket, Nimi begins a harrowing journey toward understanding, survival, and an aching rebirth.

Sex, love, rock & roll, and a reporter who's about to learn a new meaning for staying on top of her assignment...

Restaurant critic Aubrey Bordelon is never at a loss for words to describe her meals in the fancy restaurants of New Orleans. But after her magazine's high-profile music reporter falls ill, she finds herself out of her element and in a sea of screaming fans awaiting Wanderlust's lead singer, Lex Logan. The sound of his voice gives her goosebumps, and the stage presence of the hard-bodied rock star takes her breath away. So when he pulls her onstage for a sexy stunt, she knows she's in real trouble.

Lex doesn't want to pretend that the sparks on stage between him and Aubrey never happened, but it certainly makes the fact that she's writing a story on his band all the more dangerous.
